The speaker is Steve Priest, a fellow Squire's member.

His topic is Hiking the Fabled Knife Edge Trail.

Stephen L. Priest has a thirst for outdoor activities. Running, cross country skiing, biking, hiking, paddling, and triathlons are among the interests that keep him physically fit, mentally alert, and young.

Steve lives in Sunapee with his wife Catherine, his partner outdoor enthusiast and has two adult sons. Steve has a B.S. in Engineering from the University of Massachusetts (Amherst, MA), and a master's degree in Operations Research from the University of Rhode Island (Wakefield, RI). He has served as a healthcare administrator specializing in information systems and authored two healthcare management information systems textbooks. He has been an assistant professor of information systems at Daniel Webster College (Nashua, NH) and an adjunct professor at Saint Joseph's College of Maine.

He is the author of six outdoor guidebooks including his latest: "Outdoor Play in New Hampshire's Sunapee-ragged-Kearsarge Greenway" and "Outdoor Play Fun 4 Seniors". He is also a producer of community television outdoor documentaries. Steve has served in the U.S. Army.
